ACQUIRING A COAT OF TAN

One of the beauty problems that must meet its vacation time is the effect of the sun on the complexion. Unless one constantly stays indoors in summer and gives up outdoor activities, the skin is bound to feel the results of exposure, which may be seen in tan, freckles and bad sunburn.

Of these three summer problems, tan is the least objectionable to the beauty lover. Indeed, it is considered a mark of distinction. To develop an even coat of tan, which is not so prevalent to the fair-skinned and pale-skinned.

The fair type of skin that freckles badly does not develop a smooth tan. Browning preparations may be used to fade these blemishes, but the skin may be protected from direct sunlight by face powder and a wide hat, but this is all that can be done.

Medium and fair shades of skin can develop a good coat of tan without painful sunburning of reasonable rate is taken to account the skin gradually to strong sunlight. City girls who vacationing in shore resorts should be careful not to expose their faces and limbs too long to the sun during the first few days of their holiday. Many well-traveled vacationists at the shore prolong their sun-baths to such an extent that their skins are actually burned and remain unsightly and painful for days afterward. This is not all necessary for the enjoyment of outdoor life. Severe sunburn is just as bad for the skin as burns from a stove or other source of heat.

One who wishes to avoid the discomfort of red sunburn and to acquire a smooth coat of tan may use an oily preparation like cold cream or olive oil before exposure, especially if her skin is inclined to be dry.

If too heavy a tan develops, it may be lightened by a skin-soothing cream. Here is a good recipe to use for the purpose: 1 tablespoonful of lemon juice, 1 tablespoonful of orange juice, 1 tablespoonful of lime juice, 1 tablespoonful of water, 1 tablespoonful of alcohol, 1 tablespoonful of glycerine, 1 tablespoonful of rose water, 1 tablespoonful of perfume.

For the purpose of making a smooth tan, first cleanse the skin with cold cream, then smear it several times with face powder. Rubbed on the face and kept it moist. Rubbed on the face and kept it moist. Rubbed on the face and kept it moist.

DOROTHY DIX

The Lax Disciplining of the Present Generation Will Be Offset by Their Strictness With the Next, Says Dorothy Dix, and The Result Will Be Parents and Children Who Understand Each Other, and Perfect Propriety

A correspondent inquires: "What sort of parents are the younger generation going to make? What kind of mothers are these bobbed-haired, short-skirted flappers going to be?"

If you ask me, I'll say FINE. For this reason: It seems to be almost impossible for people to make a happy marriage in bringing up their children. Like a pendulum, parents swing between extreme laxity and extreme strictness, and this generation having gone the limit in spilling their offspring, the coming generation is swinging back to discipline.

The one rule that appears to prevail among parents is not to bring up their children in the manner in which they themselves were reared. This is not the result of humility, or because they consider that their own fathers and mothers made a poor job of child-rearing and that they would have been fiercer men and women developed in some other school of thought, but because there is a realization in their memory of juvenile privations that the years have never been able to efface.

Nothing is more common than to hear men and women speak of deprivations they endured in their childhood, or hardships they had to undergo, and to hear them say: "Thank God, I have saved my children from that."

So universal is this feeling that you can look at children and guess almost with certainty what the children's parents will be like, and how overindulgent as the daughters of the woman who went shabby and wore somebody's cast-off clothes in her youth.

It is the children of women who went hardheaded who wear silk stockings to school. It is the fathers who in their own youth would have been hardheaded who are now indulgent to their children. It is the men and women who were indulgent to their children who are now hardheaded to their sons and daughters up in absolute inflexibility.

And it is the parents whose own parents were grumbling tyrants who are now indulgent to their children. And it is the parents whose own parents were grumbling tyrants who are now indulgent to their children. And it is the parents whose own parents were grumbling tyrants who are now indulgent to their children.

This explains the present generation of flapping youth. Most of the parents of today were brought up in homes where a strict and narrow morality prevailed, and by hard-headed fathers and mothers who considered it to be their duty to bring their children up in subjection, and secure them in the way they thought they should go. Nobody, then, had advanced the theories that the child was a problem, or that it had any rights that parents should respect, or that it was entitled to any personal freedom of thought or action. The high road, mother and father ended the children's fate, and they were accepted or disapproved according to the measure with which they reached the parental disciplines.

It is in the reaction from this stern upbringing that has made the modern parents of today lax. It is the reaction from the discipline of the past that has made the modern parents of today lax. It is the reaction from the discipline of the past that has made the modern parents of today lax.

And now we are seeing the reaction against the too-tight parent. We are seeing the reaction against the too-tight parent. We are seeing the reaction against the too-tight parent.

These indulgent young people who have been permitted to run wild, who have been indulgent to their children, who have been indulgent to their children, who have been indulgent to their children.

If you will make a tour of the nurseries of the modern young mothers, you will find no babies being rocked to sleep; no weary mothers who have been indulgent to their children, who have been indulgent to their children, who have been indulgent to their children.

On the contrary, the modern baby, instead of being spoiled as his father and mother were, is reared by the book and disciplined like a soldier. He is made to obey and behave, and is altogether taught to be a little bit.

And if you talk with the flapper mother about how she is going to bring up her children, she will tell you that she is going to bring up her children, she will tell you that she is going to bring up her children, she will tell you that she is going to bring up her children.

And so because the people of the younger generation are young, and are keeping young, they are going to be young enough to sympathize with their children and understand them, and perhaps they will achieve the ideal of the modern parent, all of us are going to be young enough to sympathize with their children and understand them, and perhaps they will achieve the ideal of the modern parent.

Anyway, I expect this coming generation to be perfect lambs. Slicker for propriety, and as conventional as Mrs. Grundy.

Little Stories For Bedtime

Danny Meadow Mouse a Real Friend

By THORNTON W. BURGESS (Copyright)

Little Peter, the last baby of Peter Rabbit, wondered where he was, for as yet he had not seen his mother. He was in a snug little room with walls of stone, quiet dark but for the little light that came from the window, which, coming in at the doorway, had wafted him. All in a minute or two he lay blinking at the little ray of sunshine. Then all at once he remembered. He was in the old stone wall that had brought him the night before. All the sleepy-winks left him were now from what he had seen of it in the dark; that it must be a wonderful place, and he just couldn't sit still a minute longer when there was so much to see.

Like a jack-in-the-box, Little Peter stuck his head up out of the opening in the stone wall.

All Homebuilders Deserve Big Hand

"Don't forget that great army of 'home-makers' who you praise when the 'new woman' has done for fruit."

That is the plea of a nationally known clubwoman, Mrs. Walter Seaman Comly, past president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, chairman of the Culinary Arts Exposition of Women's Arts and Industries held this fall in New York.

Much attention has been given to the woman who makes a success in business.

ness or in any profession. She deserves great commendation. "Yet, in our enthusiasm, we must not forget that home-making is a profession, the most important and exacting one, that may be assumed by women.

"Fortunately colleges and clubs have taken the importance of home-making in America. Much time is being given to the study of home economics. Our girls in school have opportunities now to learn the art of home-making in all its branches. Women already in the homes are given much thought to the scientific management of their homes.

"Three women all deserve the word 'marital' applied to them. For they are serving their country well by guarding this and the coming generation. Let us not forget these faithfuls."

Some Useful Kitchen Hints

By BETSY CALLISTER

If the housewife had to depend on her own judgment in securing pure and insure food she would have little time to do anything but to make food taste. Fortunately we may be fairly sure that food bought at retail stores or at any store in our broken packages bearing the names of well-known concerns are pure and unadulterated. Still there are certain food tests that are interesting to know.

The difference in taste between demerara and butter is not a sufficient test for some persons. But butter and margarine behave and smell quite differently when a little of either is placed in a large spoon and held over a flame. Butter bubbles and gently, while margarine boils madly.

The cooking of eggs is said to be reliable in telling whether the egg is fresh or spoiled with water. Put a

Investigation and Reports Show Food Value of Fruit

Sister Mary Describes Easy and Economical Method of Canning Fruits

By SISTER MARY

Recent investigations and reports comparing the food value, mineral content and vitamin content of strawberries with oranges are extremely interesting and valuable to the housewife.

It seems that strawberries are unusually good mineral substitutes for oranges. Although slightly lower in lime, strawberries are four times higher than oranges in iron content per unit of weight.

Vitamin C, the so-called preservative, rates about as high in strawberries as in oranges. But vitamins A and B, for growing and building elements, are lower in berries than citrus fruit.

Commercially canned and home-canned berries by the cold pack method lose practically no vitamin C content through the canning process.

How to Can

Of course, canning procedures and same are quite a different thing. The large amount of sugar added changes the fruit from a protective food valuable for its natural vitamins and lime content to a confection rich in carbohydrates.

To home can strawberries, the best and easiest way to preserve the valuable but elusive vitamin is the problem before the conscientious housewife. If she must pay a comparatively high price for her fresh fruit she will find the can effect a decided saving by buying commercially canned berries for the dozen cans.

But the woman who lives in a small town, or in a community accessible to fresh markets may want to do her own canning. The hot-water bath, steam pressure cooker and hot-liquid method are all present satisfactory equipment for home canning. The general preparation and packing of the fruit in the can is the same for all methods.

A Home Outline

Since the average housewife will find the hot-water bath method less expensive to buy and quite possible to make at home the procedure is explained for this equipment.

Wash and boil berries. Carefully cut clean steel knitting needle into the fruit and if the milk turns off slowly in is pure. If it runs off quickly and is thick, the berries are not fresh.

Purity of sugar may be tested by burning. If, when in a form of sugar, it will leave no ash.

Here are some kitchen maxims from an English cook book that I think many interest you.

One red wax beaker is worth two not beakers.

When using ketchup be sparing with the salt.

A raw boiled is a stew spoiled.

Water boils when it galls oil when it boils.

When pastry comes out of the oven, never go in.

Chop as you go, a muddle makes more pudding.

Only saucapans filled with hot water begin to clean themselves.

away any bruised or soft spots on fruit.

To wash berries, drop into a colander placed in a large pan of cold water. When fruit is clean, gently lift the colander from the water letting the berries settle slowly together with out violence. Water softens the delicate fruit and rough handling breaks the summer-like covering and allows the immediate escape of the juices.

How to Can

Perfect, well-washed berries in sterilized jars, adjust tested rubbers and pour over medium syrup to cover fruit. Half seal cans and put in hot water bath. The water must cover the jars at least an inch. Process quart jars 18 minutes. After the water reaches boiling point and put jars 14 minutes. Remove from the water bath, cover and turn caps upside down. When they will cool quickly but not in a draught. When cold, store in a dark, cool place.

These specific suggestions hold true for all canning.

How to Can

To sterilize cans for packing, wash in hot soap suds. Place in scalding water. Cover and put in the boiler to be used for hot-water bath. Fill boiler with cold water, bring to the boiling point and boil for ten minutes. Remove cans from boiler as needed for filling with material. The covers should be boiled.

Wash rubbers in hot suds and rinse in scalding water. Rubbers to be sure they are fresh and elastic.

Make Fruits of Syrup

Medium syrup is made by boiling 3 cups of granulated sugar with 3 cups of water for five minutes. The liquid between 1-3 and 1 cup of sugar for each pint can of berries. Be sure to make enough syrup to fill all the cans. Excess syrup can be kept in a cool place until wanted for the next batch of canning.

To half-seal screw-top jars, tighten covers with thumb and index finger. Seal screw down as tight as possible. To half-seal spring top jars, fill cover and adjust top bolt. To seal, clamp bolt down.

Do not let the cans touch each other in the hot-water bath.

Strawberries and other fruits canned by this method retain their flavor and color and remain firm.

Color in Rugs Now Popular

Figured rugs may be the richest colored known variety of a room. All of the more beautiful rugs, the Persians, Chinese, Indian-made rugs, are diversely patterned. In the old days, rugs were not an extravagance. They were for years and years and retain their beauty as long as there is a thread of them left. As a matter of fact the old and worn ones are the most highly prized. Not that rugs should be abused. The greatest care should be taken of them, and an accidental burn from a spark or a drop of oil, especially in the center, repaired with canvas and wool in the same shades. Especially in this repair work possible in Canada, where so many new carpets, known to the art of rug weaving. The Arts and Crafts Club of New York is in contact with a number of practical rug makers living in New Canada.

In arranging a living room or sitting room or drawing room, in which one lives a great deal, we must look to rugs for color and warmth, especially in the long winter months of western Canada. If in such a room a rug is desired, the rug should be of a color and pattern that will harmonize with the color and pattern of the room. The rug should be of a color and pattern that will harmonize with the color and pattern of the room.
